Timeshare review

GRIFFITH University researchers will put Australia's $700 million timeshare tourism industry under the spotlight as part of an Australian Research Council-funded Linkage Project study into the sector. Chief investigator Professor Beverly Sparks said this was believed to be the nation's largest study into the Gold Coast-led timeshare sector. "The team will investigate what constitutes value for the 125,000 owners of timeshare in Australia," the tourism specialist said. On the Gold Coast alone, the industry provides jobs for 2571 people and pays salaries and wages of $98.3 million.
